

7 MARCH 1978

STAT

Names/Faces

Keeping Up With the CIA

Former CIA Director William Colby says foreigners worry so about Americans being unable to keep secrets that it's not easy to recruit them as intelligence informants . . . A later CIA chief, George Bush, may be interested in recruiting, too: delegates to the next Republican national convention. He may run for president — and won't settle for any lower elected office. However, secretary of state is an appointed office and he might not turn that down.